MINIMUM CRE REQUIREMENTS

All Accredited and Certified Financial Examiners and Automated Examination Specialists (AFE/CFE/AES) members of the Society of Financial Examiners who have attained their designations and have been authorized to use the same will be required to earn a minimum of 120 continuing education credit hours during each three-year period. Upon application, members may be granted an extension in which to accrue continuing education credits. Credits earned during such a grace period are applicable to the preceding reporting period and may not be used in subsequent reporting periods. AFE, CFE, and AES members who fail to maintain the required number of continuing education credits will be ineligible to hold or display the designation of Accredited Financial Examiner, Certified Financial Examiner, or Automated Examination Specialist.

APPROVED CRE SPONSORED COURSES

Programs and courses for continuing education must be directly related to the management, operation, or regulation of financial institutions, credit unions, insurance companies, or related to the financial reporting of the operations thereof and have a correlation to the discipline in which an examiner has earned a professional designation. Prior to granting credit for programs and courses, the same will be reviewed by the Board of Governors or a duly authorized committee thereof to determine that the programs and courses are contributory to professional competence and developed by individuals qualified in the subject matter. Once a program course or sponsor has been approved, the Society will assign it a sponsor number which must be used on the CRE reporting form. A list of pre-approved authorized sponsors and continuing education sources is available on SOFE's website at www.sofe.org.

AUDITS

Members are responsible for maintaining their own personal CRE credit hour records and documentation. Each year, a random number of CRE forms will be selected by the Society headquarters for audit, requiring documentation to be submitted by the member to Society headquarters for verification and for a final report to the Society's Continuing Education Committee. Members selected for audit will be notified by Society headquarters.
